A screenshot of a web form titled "Permission for Event - Details of event". The form contains the following text: "By giving permission for your charge [redacted] to go on this event, you agree that you have read and understood any attached documentation." Below this is a section for "Event Documentation:" with a bullet point for "Details of event". The form then asks "I hereby grant permission for [redacted] to attend the event" and "I have read all attached documentation and understand and agree to any terms contained therein." There is a "Notes:" section with a text area containing the placeholder "Enter additional details here (e.g. transport / dietary requirements / etc)". At the bottom, there are three buttons: "Cancel", "Grant Permission", and "Deny".
