

I Had Only Given in Because I Was Lonely - Zachary Lum

I had given in because I was lonely,
Engulfed tonight I am in treacherous fears,
For silent was the love killing me slowly.

Drowned in despair, my body became unhomely,
Broken and unworkable like rusted gears,
I had given in because I was lonely.

Heart-struck and yearning to be held closely,
Untamed in ways of love my soul appears,
For silent was the love killing me slowly.

Slowly, slowly I fall upon shadows below me,
Robotic figures won't wonder for years
Why I had given in? Because I was lonely.

Emotions flood, flail and fill overflowingly,
I crashed in my bed, praying to disappear
In silence as the love was killing me slowly.

I had departed with pills of poison held closely,
Slipping from reality, eyes ablaze with tears.
I had only given in because I was lonely.
For silent was the love killing me slowly.
